We found a small bag of apples and a note on our editorial desk one day this week and the writer of the note, Mrs. Will Woodard, asks if the sample of apple shouldn't be considered fair for this time of year. We are quite able to answer that the fruit was in splendid shape, smooth and crisp, and good enough to eat.

...They Win in a Walk...

Men are keen for style because they know the value of good appearance.

Men are critical of quality because they know that the life of their clothes depends upon it.

Men insist upon value because it makes a dollar go the full length of its duty.

On all these points men have tested the celebrated

Kuppenheimer Clothes

--have compared them and inspected them. And they've invariably found that Kuppenheimer Clothes win in a walk.

It isn't say-so that has given these clothes their leadership; it's experience, paid for with dollars.

That's the sort of standards we're upholding, that's the promise we hold out to you in the smart Spring and Summer models we're asking you to inspect now.
